PART II - CLARIFICATION

Question 1:

Would you allow a contractor with a B License to submit a bid for this project given the fact that the majority of the scope of work would normally be handled by a contractor with a B License and also, that the electrical (C-10) portion of the project will most likely represent less than 50% of the project in terms of dollar value?

Answer 1:

Bid license requirements will be revised as follows:

General Contractors bidding the project must have a valid State of California Contractors License type A or B. General Contractors will have the option of self performing the electrical portion of the work (with a valid C-10 license). If the General Contractor does not have a valid C-10 license, they may subcontract an electrician with valid C-10 license to perform the electrical portion of the scope.
